I hope this email finds you doing well.

We are reaching out to several of our former clients to see if you, or someone you know, owns a Sig Sauer P320 pistol. If so, please contact me as we are investigating claims that a defect in this pistol has caused a number of unintended discharges, including while holstered, that have caused injuries and unnecessary close calls. We believe anyone that has purchased a P320 may have a claim against Sig Sauer, regardless of whether they have experienced an unintended discharge.

As you may know, a version of these pistols has been adopted by the US Department of Defense as the primary handgun for the US military. However, DoD required a modification to the M17 and M18 pistols to prevent the sort of accidental discharges we are looking into.

If you for someone you know has a Sig P320 and would like more information about your potential claims, please respond to this email or give me a call at the number below.

Thanks.
